

BLUE GOOSE IS RAIDED AND RUM SEIZED; 1 HELD

Customers At Alleged Speakeasy At Bonneauville Unmolested by State Officers.

"The Blue Goose" lost its "head" Saturday evening when state police arrested Elmer Beck, 51, the proprietor, after a raid on the establishment along the Gettysburg-Hanover road, near Bonneauville, netted the officers alleged liquor and beer and three slot machines.

Beck was arraigned before Justice J. U. Apple on charges of illegal possession of spirituous liquors and maintaining and operating gambling devices, and was committed to jail in default of $1,300 bail on the two counts.

Acting at the direction of the district attorney's office, Sergeant Joseph Merrifield and Trooper C. B. Robenolt, of the local sub-station of state police, visited "The Blue Goose" about 9 o'clock, Saturday evening, and searched the place. About 50 bottles of alleged home-brew beer and a half gallon of supposed "hard liquor" were found by the officers in the kitchen.

A number of persons in the dining room, quenching thirsts with some of the beer, were not molested, but departed faster than they had arrived, fearing that they might be called later as witnesses against the proprietor. "The Blue Goose" is said to have been frequented by numerous residents of Gettysburg and Hanover.

Three slot machines, two operated with nickels and the other with quarters, were seized by the raiders. The machines, valued at more than $100 each, were just recently installed, the proprietor told the officers. The machines were the kind that returned money to the players whenever a winning combination appeared.

The alleged beer and whiskey and the gambling devices were brought to the sub-station of the state police, and will be disposed of later under an order from the court.

George F. Meeter, the author, points out that the trip is worthwhile for the youth who is studying history and for the adult who wishes to refresh his memory of historical events and places.

Collector Says Report to School Board Will Show Big Amount Collected.

When the Gettysburg school board meets in adjourned session this evening at the high school building, William Ogden, borough tax collector and collector of school taxes, will report that he has practically completed collection of the 1926 school taxes and made good progress on the 1927 duplicate.

Mr. Ogden today said that while he had considerable difficulty in securing settlement of the two-year-old taxes, he had been "fairly successful" in the collections, having about reached the total of $2,300 outstanding after exonerations were allowed him by the school board two weeks ago.

"And while I was collecting the 1926 school taxes, I got in the 1927 levies also," Mr. Ogden said. There was approximately $6,000 of the 1927 duplicate outstanding two weeks ago. The collector said he did not know what the total of the 1927 collections is, adding that he would give a report for the last two years at the meeting this evening.

AIR CONCERNS TO HOLD HEARINGS

Infringement of New Concern To Be Tested Before Public Service.

A hearing on the complaint of the Gettysburg flying service, incorporated, against the alleged infringement of territory by the Battlefield airways, is scheduled for Thursday before the state public service commission at Harrisburg.

The flying service is protesting the issuance by the commission of a certificate of public convenience to the alleged competing concern, which has its landing field along the Emmitsburg road. The Battlefield airways has also applied to the commission for a charter of incorporation.

Whether or not the public service commission has the authority to grant exclusive air privileges to one airplane concern engaged in call and demand service is the interesting question raised for the first time in the history of Pennsylvania and probably in the United States by the protest of the Gettysburg flying service against the Battlefield airways.

The question of who has jurisdiction over the air lanes has never been decided by the courts in this country, and in two cases over jurisdiction, raised in France, the French courts are said to have side-stepped the issue.

An automobile, driven by O. S. Hertzog, Gettysburg R. D., was damaged, but no one was injured, when the machine, according to police reports, was forced off Steinwehr avenue at the intersection of the Taneytown road, Sunday morning.

According to state highway motor patrolmen, the accident occurred when Charles Sprout, Camp Hill, traveling south on Steinwehr avenue, attempted to turn into the Taneytown road. The cars did not collide, but Hertzog, in order to avoid an accident, drove his machine off the highway and onto a mound of grass around a battlefield monument.

OBJECTION TO $10,000 BOND IS FILED HERE

Countian Takes Exception To Amount To Be Posted By Hanover Borough.

Objecting to the $10,000 bond of the borough of Hanover, posted to cover the damage to land in Conewago township to be taken for the construction of a sewage disposal plant for the York county community, D. E. Winebrenner, Jr., of Hanover, today asked the local court of common pleas to hear testimony on the objections raised to the bond.

In objecting to the court's approval of the bond, Mr. Winebrenner, in his petition, filed with S. L. Allison, prothonotary, by the firm of Keith and Sheely, alleges that the damage to his land by its acquisition as the site for the Hanover sewage disposal plant would approximate $20,000.

Bond Not Legal After alleging that the bond of $10,000 as offered for the court's approval is not drawn in accordance with the provisions of the acts of the state assembly, Mr. Winebrenner's petition sets forth that it does not specify whether the damages represent the amount he would lose by reason of the appropriation of his lands or for the acquisition of a right-of-way over the lands.

Mr. Winebrenner's petition also sets forth that the lands the borough of Hanover purposes to take are not described in the bond; that there is no allegation or proof that the borough council has passed an ordinance authorizing the appropriation of the land; that the minutes of the meetings of the Hanover council disclose that no ordinance such as is referred to in the bond tendered "is spread upon the minutes thereof or was acted upon and adopted by said town council;" that council has not authorized the execution of the bond, and that no permit has been obtained by the borough from the sanitary water board of the state for the acquisition of real estate or

Miss Earhart And Stultz Pilot Large Hydroplane To Burryport; Were In Flight Over 22 Hours, Bucking Severe Rain And Bad Weather Over Entire Way.

London, June 18.—(AP)—The trans-atlantic monoplane Friendship, carrying the first woman ever to span the Atlantic by air, landed at Burryport, Wales, at 12:40 p. m., today, 22 hours and 40 minutes after taking off from Trepassey, Newfoundland.

The plane which had been sighted 75 miles west of Ireland by steamer America landed in Burry inlet because of a shortage of fuel. Wilmer Stultz, the pilot, brought his ship down without difficulty close to the shore.

In Good Spirits Miss Amelia Earhart, Boston social worker and copilot of the plane, landed with her companions in a motor boat which set out from the coast guard station.

The crew of the Friendship which includes Louis Gordon, mechanic, was in the best of spirits and looked none the worst for their flight across almost 2,000 miles of ocean, stretching between Newfoundland and Great Britain.

Had Bad Weather Although the plane settled down in a swampy region it was not long before hundreds of spectators were on the scene. Crowds rushed by foot and motor to the port and the nearby city of Llanely gave the aviators a great reception.

Stultz told the Associated Press that the plane had been forced to land because of a shortage of fuel. He said that bad weather and a heavy mist accompanied the ship the greater part of the journey while rain was almost incessant.

Glad And Tired Burryport, Wales, June 18.—(AP)—"I am very glad we have done it and very happy we landed," Miss Amelia Earhart said to a correspondent of the Associated Press as she stepped from the monoplane Friendship. "I am too tired to say more."

Moored At Swansea London, June 18.—(AP)—An Exchange telegraph dispatch from Burryport said the trans-atlantic plane Friendship will spend the night at Swansea docks instead of going direct to Bristol as had been planned.

L. Allison, Fairfield. Games and contests and a boys' baseball game are the other features for the opening day of the carnival.

Ruth Elder and Capt. George Haldeman, who attempted a flight from New York to Paris in the airplane American Girl, were rescued by an oil tanker in the Atlantic about 600 miles off the Spanish coast October 13 last, two days after their plane took off from Roosevelt field. When the mishap forced their plane down in the ocean they had covered 2,623 miles, at that time a distance record for continuous flight over water.

ADOPT SALUTE OF FASCISTS

Highway Secretary Leader Promoting Signal Of Greetings.

Harrisburg, June 18.—(AP)—The familiar salute to motorists of the raising of the right hand, palm toward the person accosted, usually means "Pull over to the side of the road and get out your license card," but to James Lyall Stuart, secretary of highways, it means "Greetings Comrade."

The reason is that the secretary has adopted the Fascist salute within the ranks of the department as a standard regulation. Secretary Stuart recently spent some time in Italy and was impressed by the salutation employed by comrades of the Fascisti. When they meet each holds up the right hand, palm outward.

At an engineering conference here Secretary Stuart said that it was not possible for him to know personally and recognize every member of the department, and explaining the Fascist custom, he asked that it be employed whenever co-workers met him, whether on the street or at one of the meetings. The idea was seized upon with enthusiasm.

During the remainder of the administration the salute will be an accepted institution as Secretary Stuart has indicated to the field offices that while traveling over the highways on inspection tours or visiting the various divisions he will be on the lookout for the now familiar "Greetings Comrade."

WEATHER FOILS HUNT FOR ITALIA

Melting Ice Causes Fog To Spread Over Land Where Men Are Walking.

King's Bay, Spitzbergen, June 18.—(AP)—Fine summer weather is operating to delay relief measures for General Umberto Nobile and his marooned companions and is also adding to their immediate peril. The ice in the region of Foyné island, where the castaways are awaiting rescue, is melting fast under the strong sun.

The summer heat, moreover, is causing heavy fogs. These are preventing Capt. Hjalmar Riiser-Larsen and Lieut. Luetzow Holm from making any flights. Reports from the Braganza and the Hobby, the ships which are carrying the Norwegian aviators along the north coast of the Archipelago, state that conditions thereabouts are too difficult for flying.

Fog Turns Back Seaplane
The big Italian seaplane Savoia-55, which Major Maddalena is piloting to Spitzbergen, was turned back yesterday by the fog. It is understood that Major Maddalena headed for Vadsoe, Norway.

Much reliance has been placed upon this plane and also upon the French seaplane which is coming under the leadership of Roald Amundsen. It is hoped that when these machines get into the north they can speedily establish actual physical touch with the Nobile party, if not able to effect immediate rescues. They are to be reinforced shortly by a large Dornier-Wahl plane which is coming under the pilotage of Major Pense.

All three of these machines have large cargo capacity as well as passenger room. They will be depended upon especially to scout for the seven missing members of the Italia's crew and for the three men who are supposed to be making their way across the ice toward the Hobby and the Braganza.

for a permit for the location of a sewage disposal plant on his lands.

Received No Petition

Mr. Winebrenner, in his petition, also objects to the fact that no copy of any petition presented to the court for approval of the bond was served upon him, asserting that he reserves the right to file other and additional exceptions to the bond so tendered to him "when and if the same is finally presented to your honorable court for approval."

Mr. Winebrenner is the owner of a farm in Conewago township, containing 182 acres, upon which, he has learned, the borough plans to erect a sewage disposal plant.

Judicial cognizance of the petition will probably be taken by Judge D. P. McPherson on Wednesday.

STOP ISSUANCE OF ROAD BONDS

Harrisburg, June 18.—(AP)—The state today was enjoined from printing $3,000,000 of road bonds to replace those purchased and cancelled by the board of finance and revenue by the Dauphin county court. The court held that Governor Fisher's order to State Treasurer Lewis and Auditor General Martin to prepare these bonds were without any constitutional or legislative authority and were therefore void.

The decision upheld the contention of William M. Montgomery, Jr., who brought a tax payer's suit against the fiscal officers to prevent the re-issuance of the bonds.

HOOVER PLANS FOR CAMPAIGN

Expected to Begin Battle For Presidency in California Before Long.

Washington, June 18.—(AP)—Presidential campaign activities were discussed today by Secretary Hoover, Republican nominee, as delegates returning from the Kansas City national convention conferred with him.

Heading the Hoover engagement list were W. W. Atterbury, president of the Pennsylvania railroad, and Republican committeeman from Pennsylvania, and John H. Tilson, of Connecticut, house leader. A half dozen other returning delegates saw the secretary briefly.

All of the conferences, the first of a long series which the nominee expects to hold this week, dealt with campaign outlooks. There are some differences of opinion on the minor issues, but the closest aides of the secretary are fairly well in agreement in favoring his early departure for California.

Higher Rating To Be Demanded For Pedagogues

Harrisburg.—The school year now closed will mark a significant period in the history of education in Pennsylvania, Dr. John A. H. Keith, superintendent of Public Instruction, said today. It registers the time he said when all new teachers entering service in the public schools of the Commonwealth must hold a standard certificate.

The advance Pennsylvania has made toward higher teacher qualification is best understood when compared with the year 1920, Dr. Keith asserted. At that time more than 45 per cent of the teachers in the public schools were without standard certification. Today, 90 per cent of the teachers possess standard licenses and the remaining 10 per cent are rapidly acquiring the necessary credits for standard certificates.

To date, 26,000 teachers' licenses have been issued by the Department of Public Instruction—4000 of which were granted to college graduates, 7400 to normal school graduates, and the remainder to teachers with miscellaneous preparation.

TORNADO TOLL IS 8 DEAD, 100 HURT

Southwest Is Swept By Ter- rific Storms; Losses Will Exceed Million.

Kansas City, June 18.—(AP)—Eight persons dead, upward of 100 injured and damage passing the million dollar mark was the toll of tornadic winds that struck southwestern Oklahoma and southern Kansas Saturday and Sunday.

The towns of Blair and Headrick, in Oklahoma, were hardest hit. Four persons lost their lives in Blair and four others, negroes, were killed in the latter town. Most of the damage reported last night was wreaked in Oklahoma. Heavy rains in Kansas, Missouri and Oklahoma came in the wake of the atmospheric disturbances which have prevailed in the southwest for nearly a week.

Two tornadoes, neither of which took any lives, were reported in Kansas, one near Hutchinson Saturday night and the other near Emporia yesterday afternoon. High winds were reported in other sections.

Few injuries were reported in Sunday's storms in Kansas, although damage to farm property was considerable and much live stock was lost. The approaching storm gave warning to inhabitants of the area struck, and afforded them a chance to seek safety, thereby averting possible loss of life.

Philadelphia, June 18.—(AP)—Responding to a telephone call in answer to her advertisement for a position as maid Mary McGinty, 23, was choked to death in a physician's office here by the doctor's negro chauffeur-butler, who was alone in the house. In the kitchen of the home, the negro, Clarence Kull, 25, was found dead from illuminating gas. At his side lay a revolver and a razor.

The tragedy was discovered today by the son of Dr. Willard Perry, in West Philadelphia, who had returned from his father's farm in New Jersey, where the family had spent the week-end.

GLORIOUS BETSY
NOVELIZED BY
ARLINE DE HAAS

Copyright 1928, Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.
"GLORIOUS BETSY," starring Dolores Costello, is a Warner Bros. picture adaptation of this novel. Based on the play by Rida Johnson Young.

SYNOPSIS
The bewitching Betsy Patterson, when staying with her father at Springs Inn, when they are called home to Baltimore to enter Jerome Bonaparte, brother of Napoleon. While at the Inn she is attracted to her French tutor, whom she knows as La Vert, French officers, however, who sit him, address him deferentially as Captain Bonaparte. When La Vert declines to accompany Betsy to Baltimore she is piqued and insults him. Elaborate preparations are under way at the Patterson home. The guests are waiting for Bonaparte, but Betsy steals away the rose arbor in response to a mysterious message from La Vert.

"That must be Captain Bonaparte!" Major Patterson exclaimed, starting towards the door. "Where's Betsy?" He looked about frantically. "Where is she?" he called towards the garden, but there came no answering call. "Lord love us, what's become of the girl?" he demanded, looking this way and that. Here are distinguished guests arriving, and no one to receive them. He stepped out onto the veranda and tried to pierce the darkness, but with no success. "Betsy! Betsy!" he shouted. "Betsy Patterson!" "I can't find Betty anywhere," Miss Massenbird exploded, her eyes sparkling with excitement. "Of course not," Patterson retorted sarcastically. "And Captain Bonaparte is arriving." Now on their prancing, tightly lined horses came St. Pierre and Dufresne. Next came the elaborate coach, conveying the guests of the evening. Then, on another horse, rode De Langiac, bringing up in the rear. The horsemen stopped, drew their reins to the boy at the horseback; flung their legs over the saddle and dismounted. The carriage came to the block and stopped. De Langiac leapt to the ground and with Dufresne, stood at attention. St. Pierre stepped forward and threw open the door of the coach. The crowd waited, tense.

"What do you want, sir?"

"Captain Bonaparte!" St. Pierre stepped back to allow his charge to alight. The crowd strained forward, eagerly, pushing and crushing each other in the excitement. "There was a long pause. No one spoke. The silence beat ominously oppressively. St. Pierre looked at Dufresne. Dufresne looked at St. Pierre. Then they both peered into the coach. There was not a soul inside. St. Pierre and Dufresne spoke to each other with their eyes, and Dufresne nodded his head slightly. St. Pierre closed the door of the coach, softly, and with Dufresne and De Langiac, turned to the crowd and their host. "I regret to say," St. Pierre announced in a slow, commanding tone of voice, "that Captain Bonaparte has been delayed. We expect him at any moment." With a click of his heels and a bow he started up the walk to the porch, followed by his two companions.

There was almost a sigh of relief, for the strain and intensity had been great, and now it was over. Patterson breathed a thankful "Thank God!" and welcomed his new guests with a tremendous gusto. "Sacred! The young fool vanished from the coach like a puff of smoke," St. Pierre whispered to his companion, the moment he could catch a word aside. He turned to De Langiac. "Not twenty minutes ago I left Captain Bonaparte, there, in the street," he murmured to the messenger. "I cannot explain it," De Langiac frowned. He turned to Dufresne. But he must be found. It is best to leave St. Pierre here to talk. Dufresne, you must take one road—I will take the other." He drew him near the steps and down into the hall. "You go that way," he pointed along the road over which they had just traveled.

"Very well, Monsieur," Dufresne nodded. "She's not upstairs, William." Miss Massenbird piped up, right at the Major's heels. "I've searched every room." "Then search them again," the Major sputtered, turning on his sister-in-law. "She must be upstairs. She must be somewhere. She hasn't melted." "You go and look for her, Eph," the Major commanded his servant. "Search the dairy—the coach house—look everywhere, and don't you dare come back till—" "Yes, sah! No sah! Eph ducked and hurried away on the search. "Now, it's no use, William," Miss Massenbird exclaimed. "That won't bring her back—getting excited." "I am not excited, Madam," the Major shook his fists. "I am not excited—I'm disgraced!" He paced up and down the porch nervously. "Captain Bonaparte's likely to arrive at any moment, and no Betty! It's an insult, that! I understand that tutor's in town. Could he be at the bottom of this, I wonder?" The Major stopped short, amazed at his own speculations. "Now, I wonder," he muttered. He halted before Miss Massenbird. "I suspect everything, now. Do you know anything that you have been concealing from me?" he demanded. "Now, William, of course, I don't," Miss Massenbird looked sadly abused. "But I do suspect something myself. Somehow, William, I feel it in my bones." "Bones! Bones!" Patterson shrieked. "A lot of good that does. Well," he calmed himself slightly, "you'd better return to my guests and look after them."

"Yes, William," Miss Massenbird lowered her head apologetically and hurried out of the way of the wrath of the Major. "Ah, Monsieur," St. Pierre bowed. "I am chagrined, Monsieur. St. Pierre bowed. "I can not forgive myself for allowing this to occur. I must apologize." "No, no," Patterson beamed. "I must apologize—for the absence of my daughter—your hostess. I will," he turned towards the garden, but faced Miss Massenbird. "Have you found her, William?" the aunt questioned anxiously. "Yes, don't you see I have!" The Major threw his arms about temptuously. "Not!" he thundered, "don't you see I haven't! I don't know where she is. Betty! Betsy Patterson!" he called. "But Betsy, out in the concealing shadows, only drew further back. "Why—why did I tear it?" she was murmuring as she spread out the torn note on her lap. "Why did I tear it—and in such little bits!" She looked closely at the pieces of paper and tried to make out their shattered words. And in her absorption she did not notice the figure that approached the gate from the garden and stood for a moment, watching her efforts. Suddenly a movement startled her. She looked up. "Oh," she gasped. There, in front of her, stood "La Vert."

CHAPTER X
While the entire Patterson household was making a great to do over the absence of the two most important people in the huge assemblage, Betsy and her supposed tutor receded further back into the garden out of ear-shot of those on the veranda. Now and again they could hear the calls, but at the sound of her name, both the man and the girl drew further off and forgot the others in the intensity of their conversation. The tutor, his whole body completely enfolded in a long, great, military cape, was pressing his advantage. "Don't go away, Mademoiselle," he had begged, as Betsy jumped up, startled at his first approach. "Please don't go. I must talk with you." He had gazed at her, pleading.

Betsy, frightened at the sudden appearance of her tutor, and then anxious to show her anger and disdain, as well as her assumed surprise, had looked very severe and very grave. "You!" she had exclaimed, just as though she had never been trying to piece together the precious letter, the scraps of which had been clutched tightly in her hand. "What do you want, sir? How dare you!" she had cried, stamping her foot. "I dare, because I'm desperate," the "tutor" had returned, almost angrily, but very firmly, as though he intended being listened to, regardless of the whims of Mistress Betsy. "I want a new lease on life, Betsy. Ah, dear, forgive me," he had cried. "For this week past I have not lived." He had taken her arm and led her into the rose arbor, where they were now talking quietly. (To be continued.)

ONE HUNDRED YEARS AGO

Married.—On Tuesday, the 10th instant, by the Rev. Mr. Bear, Alexander Young to Miss Margaret Hattan, both of this borough.
On the 5th inst., by the Rev. John Herbst, George Fehl to Miss Mary Orner, both of Menallen township.
On the 10th inst., by the same, Michael Saltzgeber to Mrs. Catharine Weaver, both of Straban township.

Excavations at Pompeii.—Many laborers are employed in disinterring the ancient city of Pompeii, which was buried by an eruption of Mount Vesuvius in the year 79 or 1749 years ago. They have lately advanced to a part of the town that was occupied by the more wealthy citizens, where they find spacious streets and splendid houses. The articles found in these houses are rich and beautiful and display in a remarkable manner the labor and ingenuity of the ancient Romans. Two glass vases have been discovered, one of which contained olives with the oil in which they had been placed 1749 years ago. These olives are still soft and pulpy, and have a strong smell and greasy taste. Some of them have even a part of the stalks on which they grew. The other vase contained oil of olives. One street laid open in Pompeii is lined on both sides with tombs, some entire and some in ruins. The mother is there, stretched by the side of the father, and children according to the several ages, in regular order beside the mother.

Died.—On Saturday last, at an advanced age, Benjamin Reed, of Hamilton township.
On Sunday night last, after a long illness, Mrs. Charlotte Shower, widow of T. R. Shower, deceased, and daughter of William McClellan, Sr., Esq., of Cumberland township.

(Ad.) Caution to Trespassers.—The subscribers having sustained injury from persons trespassing on their lands, pulling down their fences, felling timber, etc., hereby caution all persons from fishing and hunting with dog or gun, or trespassing in any manner on their lands as they are determined to no longer submit to such depredations, and assure all offenders, that the law will, for the future, be rigidly enforced without respect to persons.

Peter Weikert, James McCleary, J. Cunningham, William Cobean, John S. Crawford, William Scott, William Lowdon, Armory Bigham, Jacob Kieffhauser, David Eiker, Abm. Krice, Jr., Abm. Scott, Jr., Samuel Cobean, Abm. Scott, Sr., David McMillan, Christian Webber, Conrad Kieffhauser, John Stewart.

Population.—Upon an equal space where one man subsists in Iceland, 3 men subsist in Norway; 14 in Sweden; 36 in Turkey; 52 in Poland; 63 in Spain; 99 in Ireland;

114 in Switzerland; 127 in Germany; 152 in England; 153 in France; 172 in Italy; 192 in Naples; 224 in Holland; 1,103 in Malta.

Fast Sailing.—The brig Erie, Captain Abbott, which arrived last week at Philadelphia from Bordeaux, was only 13 days from land to land.

SEVENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO
The jail of Adams county has been tenanted for some time past. This speaks well for the morality of our county and contrasts very creditably with some of our neighboring counties, whose calendar of crime presents a lamentable array at every court of quarter sessions.

No less than 150 wagons, loaded exclusively with strawberries, crossed the Hoboken ferry, on Tuesday night last, for the New York market, where they are selling at 3 cents per basket.

Adams County Post Offices.—So far as we have heard, the following changes have been made in addition to the Gettysburg and Abbottstown Postmasters. Those appointed are:

Littlestown—Mrs. M. Jones.
Hunterstown—Jacob Melhorn.
Cashtown—Jacob Mark.
Bendersville—William B. Wilson.
Menallen—Mr. Creglo.
Arendtsville—Mr. Eyster.
Fairfield—Jacob Brinkerhoff.

Broadway, New York, is perhaps the most densely crowded thoroughfare in America. 558 omnibuses pass through it incessantly. It is proposed to afford relief from this annoyance by removing the omnibuses and substituting a railway with 61 cars.

Distressing Accident.—On Saturday week, a son of Col. John Wolford, of Latimore township, in this county, was drowned in the Conodoguinet creek, near Hoguesstown, Cumberland county, while bathing with his companions. He was a student in the Mechanicsburg academy. His body was not recovered for some hours afterwards. We deeply sympathize with his afflicted relatives.

Embarkation of Emigrants for Liberia.—The barque, Adeline, received on board last evening one hundred and thirty-four emigrants for Liberia. Ninety-six of these people are from Tennessee, and the remainder from this state—twenty-seven belonging to respectable colored families, well known in Savannah. They leave here many sincere friends, both among the white and colored people, and fervent prayers for their safety and success. They are well supplied for their voyage and many months after their arrival in Africa, and many friends there joyfully await their coming. We look for increasing interest in Liberia among the benevolent of the south, among all who desire that Africa may be enlightened, and cheered by His word who came to be the "light of the world."
(Savannah Georgian, 10th inst.)

An arrival from Havana confirms the statement that, notwithstanding the watchfulness of the British cruisers, 1,100 slaves had been landed on the south side of the island of Cuba from the Lady Suffolk. The vessel was scuttled after landing the slaves. Several thousand slaves have been landed on the Island during the past six months.

INSURES PROMPTNESS

Pittsburgh—District Attorney Samuel H. Gardner has adopted new regulations to punish tardiness in court. From now on bail bonds of all defendants not in court at 10 a. m. the day their case is to be tried will be forfeited. Processes for arrest of these defendants also will be issued. Attachments will be issued in the case of prosecutors who are not present.

COUNT THE COST

Count the cost before you buy.
Count the cost before you do,
This will save you many a sigh,
This will keep your record true.

Pleasure wears a smiling face,
Cheap her trinkets seem to be,
But who follows her in chase
Oft returns to misery.

Life is long, and sticky shame
Clings to garments bright and fair;
Once dishonor stains your name,
Long that mark you'll have to wear.

Count the cost of every smile,
Count the cost in pain and tears,
Joy that lasts a little while
May bring shame which lasts for years.

A Curve And A Line

That Make For

Fascination

Prize audacity, this dress! The startling and simple audacity of the artist in line. It looks as if the designer had taken 115 pounds of girlish contour and just rolled it up in one big frilly, flouncy bow-knot! No lovelier combination of lines was ever achieved than this sweep on one side from shoulder to thigh and the answering curve beginning at the waist on the other side and rippling across to meet the first. Here is a dress that "takes wearing" but is exquisite if carried off. For evening, any of the lovely shades of taffeta, tulle, soft, light-weight crepe or velvet make a frock that needs no other trimming than its own beautiful lines and material. By adding long tight sleeves and raising the neck line it becomes a charming afternoon frock. Lace flouncing on satin crepe or crepe de chine is a soft and loving combination and a change which may be decided by the wearer of this frock without altering its smart lines.

As the Old Red Rooster was dusting the walls of Uncle Lucky's old barn, down fell a little black spider from her web in the corner.

"You're a very mean rooster to brush down my web. For now I must spin me another. Though things must be clean, you've no right to be mean. I've a notion to tell your good mother."

complained Mrs. Spider.
"Please don't," begged the Old Red Rooster. "My mother is a very old hen, and it might so worry her that she'd never lay another egg."

"Very well," agreed the nice lady spider, and setting to work, she soon spun for herself a comfortable web in the very spot from which the old fowl had so carelessly brushed her lacy bungalow.

Pretty soon the Old Red Rooster strutted out in the sunshine, and while he was looking here and there, wondering what next to do, up drove Uncle Lucky and his bunny nephew in the Luckymobile. "Well, here we are, home again!" exclaimed the old gentleman rabbit, lifting his precious wedding stove-pipe hat in order to wipe the perspiration from his forehead with his blue silk polka-dot handkerchief. After which he looked at his gold watch and chain, and then in a little cracked mirror on the barn wall to satisfy himself that his hat was on straight and the diamond horseshoe pin safe in his purple cravat.

Then into his red shingled house hopped the old bunny man with his little rabbit nephew. "Let's set the graphophone going," cried the little bunny, who always wanted something to do, and could never be still from morning till night.

"The candy cat ate a chocolate mouse. Oh, dearie, dearie, me! And the yellow toy dog chased the tiny toy cat. Right up a cinnamon tree," sang that wonderful machine, making such sweet music that the two dear little rabbits never noticed that somebody was peering in at the window. Gracious me! Why do disagreeable things so often happen when least expected? But, come to think of it,—if we were looking for them perhaps they wouldn't happen.

"Ha, ha!" said Danny Fox to himself, tiptoeing over the little front porch to get a better view by squinting through the little crack between the window sill and the half lowered shade. "It's a long time since I've eaten a fat rabbit," and softly pushing up the window, he crept into the room. Oh, why did that graphophone keep

Popularity

The play that is pleasing thousands is the play to see. The book everybody's talking about is the book to read. People whom others like, you want to meet.

Popularity, after all, is the public's stamp of approval. Plays and books and people become popular because we like them.

A new soap or a vacuum cleaner or a dress material is not so much popular because it's advertised as it is advertised because it's popular. That is, it must meet your every requirement, else it would be a waste of money to advertise it.

The products you find advertised in these pages are popular products. They have been weighed and found worthy.

Read the advertising here in your paper

. . . it will introduce you to products that are pleasing thousands

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

THE WAY PEOPLE LOOK

AN EDITOR once saw George Meredith and Thomas Hardy lunching together and remarked that Hardy's features gave the impression of "many thought-worn eyes and morrows," whereas Meredith "looked as if he had met and mastered life."

There are faces that we trust without even waiting for the words that might come from them.

You know a masterful face the minute that you see it. There is something in it, somehow. Something that beggars description, that out-talks all utterance.

I look into the face of my friend. I see what I feel in there. I see tenderness, trust, understanding, sympathy, and an intelligent and healthy outlook upon the stern affair of life.

Our faces are really what we make them. Beauty of feature is not all. And the way we look is about the way we feel or are thinking, or the way we have felt and thought for a long time. The way people look is largely the way they live.

There are those who always look good to us, whose faces always mean something to us, because we know what is behind them.

I am always interested in faces. I like to study them—especially faces that I meet in new places. I like to speculate in faces.

If you study a face intently, you can actually see the change of expression, be it ever so small, as the mind of that person throws out its thoughts.

Each day we place into the lines of our faces just a little deeper and more secure all our ideals, our hopes and aspirations, as well as our disappointments and losses. There they remain. Is it any wonder that we watch people's faces to see how they look?

Is it any wonder that we learn to love a face when we know what that face has gone through to make it all that it is?

First in the d.p.m. test!

If you want to know which cleaner will do the best work for you, find out the results of the recent d.p.m. (dirt per minute) tests.

These tests, made with the Hoover and three other popular cleaners, showed that in approximately twenty minutes of cleaning the Hoover removed as much dirt as any of the others removed in eighty minutes, and that in the ordinary cleaning time for a nine-by-twelve rug the Hoover removed from 60% to 80% more dirt!

The oftener a rug is Hoover cleaned, the longer it lasts. For the Hoover effectively removes not only the surface dust and lint, but it gets the deeply-embedded, nap-cutting grit against which ordinary cleaning methods are powerless. And with this greater, more protective cleanliness comes also a greater rug beauty, through the brightening of rug colors and straightening and lifting of the nap.

You can have your choice of two types of Hoovers—the famous Model 700 and the new popular-priced Hoover. We will make you a liberal allowance for your old cleaner. And we will gladly demonstrate the Hoover any day in your home.

Million People Are Filmed For Vidor Picture

Director Photographed At Least That Many Making His "The Crowd"

MOST OF THEM UNAWARE

New York City, Coney Island, Pittsburgh and Rochester Contributing Big Scenes.

It was not until after Director King Vidor had filmed more than a million people in the congested manufacturing and commercial centers of the eastern states that he believed he had caught the proper spirit of "The Crowd," his new twelve-reel special for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Most of these people were filmed at a time they were utterly unconscious of the fact they were appearing in a motion picture.

With masked batteries of cameras, Vidor caught the immense theatre crowds of New York's Broadway. He filmed the noon day crowds of Fifth avenue and Broadway, the exclusive shopping districts of New York, the great financial district, the docks and waterfronts.

He got the exits of the towering skyscrapers as they discharged their tens of thousands of employees for the night and from barges in the harbor "shot" the magnificent skyline of the busiest city in the world.

At Pittsburgh, Penn., he used the thousands of employees of the world's greatest steel mills and at Rochester, N. Y., worked against a background of the great kodak factories and the Eastman laboratories.

Coney Island furnished its great crowds of merry-makers and Niagara Falls was used as a location where he filmed the honeymoon sequence, much of it against the scenic backgrounds of the falls that have been visited by countless honeymooners for more than a century.

The great automobile factories of Detroit furnished their quotas of human beings to impress upon screen audiences the futility of one man's puny struggles against the world.

"The Crowd" is Vidor's first all-American story since "The Big Parade" and was written by himself.
